Points & Plugs

By Chris Browning

(This was carried over from January)

Winter has seized control of central Ohio since November, and doesn't appear to want go anywhere any time soon. This has given me an opportunity to catch up on some reading, which mostly is comprised of auto magazines. I subscribe to several different titles, and thought I'd share my views of them here. Auto magazines are a good way to keep up with the hobby, and learn about cars, parts and technical issues that you haven't heard of or have never seen. I'm only going to discuss magazines that I subscribe to, so if you have a favorite that I don't mention, let me know!

Hemming's: HMN, Classic Car and Muscle Machines: The best reading on paper! HMN is the "bible" of the hobby, and I started reading my dad's issues in the '70s. I enjoy looking through the listings (I always check out the Ford and Merc sections first!), and it usually takes at least a couple of sittings to get through the entire issue. I also subscribe to Classic Car and Muscle Machines, and I feel that these are the best magazines on the market. Variety, great writing and awesome pics make for quality reading, and their issues focusing on one owner or original cars always grab my attention.

Motor Trend & Automobile: I subscribe to these for all my info on the new cars, and also the racing coverage and auction results. Keeping up to date on the new technology and upcoming models is important to me on both personal and professional levels, and these two titles usually hit the mark.

Car Craft: I've been an on and off subscriber to CC since my high school days, but if it wasn't cheap (less than $6 a year), I'd probably drop it. Most of the articles are Chevy biased, and ads make up a majority of the magazine each month. However, every once in a while they surprise me (the April '14 issue featured a '66 Comet Capri!!!). The tech articles are the best reason to subscribe, as I've utilized a couple of the procedures that they describe. For this reason alone, it's worth the low price of a subscription.

Ohio Auto & RV: This one is free at Kroger's, UDF, etc. I try to pick one up each week, as it keeps me current on used car and truck prices. I bought our Focus after seeing it in one of the issues, and I've sold a couple of cars through their listings.

Hopefully winter is about done so I can get the Merc out, but until then I've got some more reading to do! See you at a car show soon!
